

Ajit Doval: The National Security Strategist of India

Early Life and Education

Ajit Kumar Doval was born on January 20, 1945, in Ghiri Banelsyun village in Pauri Garhwal, Uttarakhand. He is the son of a former Indian Army officer. Doval graduated with a Master's degree in Economics from Agra University in 1967 before joining the Indian Police Service (IPS) in the Kerala cadre in 1968.

Career in Intelligence and National Security

Ajit Doval quickly rose through the ranks due to his exceptional operational skills and analytical acumen. He served for decades as an undercover operative in the Intelligence Bureau (IB). Doval is known for missions during the Khalistani insurgency, operations in Kashmir, Northeast India, and seven years undercover in Pakistan. He played a key role in Sikkim's integration, the rescue of 46 Indian nurses from ISIS in Iraq (2014), and India's response to the 2016 Uri and 2019 Pulwama-Balakot attacks.

Role as National Security Advisor (NSA)

Appointed on May 30, 2014, by Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Ajit Doval became India's fifth NSA. He advises on security and foreign policy and is known as India's 'James Bond' and 'Modern Chanakya'. Under his leadership, India conducted surgical strikes in 2016 and the Balakot air strikes in 2019.

Honors and Recognition

Ajit Doval is a recipient of the Kirti Chakra, making him the first police officer to receive this prestigious peacetime gallantry award.

Legacy

Ajit Doval's confidential work and fearless leadership have transformed India's national security framework. His legacy continues as a sharp, strategic mind in Indian intelligence and defense circles.
